Patron Saint of Theater

Genesius was an actor in the third century and his story is one that is an ancient one, though nonetheless impressive in terms of his faith. He was performing on the stage in front of Diocletian (an emperor known for hating Christians) in Rome. He was portraying a catechumen that was about to be baptized in the play, which was satirizing the sacrament. During the ceremony, it was said that he suddenly converted to Christianity.

Special thanks to these kind and generous people for going above and beyond with assistance and support:
